

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

A Chinese puzzle would be a very suitable object to which to compare the present condition of the Laws of Mauritius : notwithstanding that our Legislature has, during the last few years, lost no opportunity of consolidating numbers of laws into complete Codes or Chapters.

To discover what are the laws that have altogether ceased to be in force, is a task still requiring much study, patience, and ingenuity,—while it is yet more difficult to pick out the fragments of laws which have preserved a partial existence, and to piece them together so that they may present to the understanding a clear view of what is called the “law on the subject.”

I have endeavoured in the following pages to make a Key to the Puzzle.

It would have been of very little use for me, to have simply pointed out that, on such and such a matter, there was a certain Ordinance numbered so and so : for, when the ordinance had been found, the seeker would have been uncertain as to whether he could rely on the provisions before him, or whether some portion of them had not been modified or repealed.—I have therefore not only indicated the law, but I have also shewn (chiefly by foot-notes) those of its provisions that have been amended or abrogated ; and I need scarcely mention that by transcribing these annotations at their proper places in the law-books, their usefulness will be much increased.

Accordingly the objects I have had in view are to indicate what are the laws in force upon any subject, to draw attention to any parts of these modified by later laws, and to point out where the laws may be found in the books ; it must, however, be observed that I have not considered it to be within the province of this work to classify the provisions of such voluminous enactments as the French Codes, Colonial Penal Code,—Bankruptcy, Customs, and District Court Ordinances, &c. ; a complete Index of any one of which, indeed, would form a book in itself.

In order to avoid omitting any law which ought to appear in this Index, I have placed as little reliance as possible on the yearly reprints of the Colonial Laws, because those Collections are known to be very imperfect ; as however Reprints are the only records extant of the Legislation for the period previous to the Capitulation of the Island in 1810, those early authorities have, of necessity, been accepted as correct. But from 1810 to the present time, I have depended for information solely upon the Official Gazettes of Mauritius, each page of which has been gone over by me attentively.

II

An important result of this research is that there are laws noted in this Index, which are only to be found in those Gazettes.

In a work professing to indicate merely the laws in force on a certain date, it is evident that many enactments, though not repealed in express terms, must be omitted on the ground that they have been tacitly superseded by later legislation or have ceased to have effect from one or another cause,—and such is the case in the present compilation. I must state, however, that I have only assumed the responsibility of rejecting laws of apparently doubtful existence, when, by experience or careful study, I have been satisfied that they are no longer in force, and would lessen the utility of the Index if inserted therein.—If I shall be found to have exercised good judgment on this delicate point I shall think my pains well bestowed.

To explain in detail the arrangements of this Index it is necessary to relate a few things already well known to those accustomed to open our law-books; accordingly, it is not for them this part of the preface is intended.

The legislation of Mauritius from the year 1715 to 1823 was long ago collected and reprinted in three books commonly called the Code Delaleu, Code Decaen, and Code Farquhar* ; the laws in each of these Codes are numbered consecutively, and when mention is made of any one of these laws it is spoken of, not by its date, but by its Code and Number. Thus the law concerning Notaries, passed on the 16th Prairial, Year XII, is numbered 59 in the Code Decaen. It is noted in this work as, Decaen 59.—I have followed the same system of indication with respect to these three Codes.

On the creation in 1825 of a Council of Government in the Colony, the Acts of that Legislative Body were called "Ordinances" which were and continue to be numbered consecutively in the order of their passing; a new series being commenced annually. The laws of this class are always quoted by their No., and Year.

In the Royal Instructions issued to the Governors of Mauritius between the years 1825 and 1863, it was provided that any ordinance, concerning which Her Majesty's Pleasure was not made known within three years next after its date, should be deemed to be disallowed and should cease to be in force. But the Royal Instructions issued since the year 1863 contain no such condition, and therefore the legal existence of Ordinances passed since then and during the present Administration, does not depend upon their having been duly confirmed.—In order to avoid covering the Pages of this Index with figures not absolutely necessary, and which might lead to confusion, the dates of the Confirmation of Ordinances have not been inserted: these dates are only useful with respect to the period at which the confirmation of an Ordinance was a matter of legal

* They are Volumes I, II and III respectively of Rouillard's Collection of the Laws of Mauritius.

III

importance; they may be found in Rouillard's Collection of the Laws of Mauritius.

There are two other kinds of Colonial Laws which proceed from the Governors; they are called Proclamations and Government Notices. I have indicated them by their dates.

On some subjects the law of Mauritius is affected by Orders emanating from Her Majesty in Council and by Acts of Parliament; I have noted the former of these by their dates, and the latter in the usual manner in which British Statutes are mentioned. — The date of their promulgation in the Island is also given whenever practicable.

International Treaties, &c., are shewn by their dates, as well as by the dates of the Government Notices by which they were published.

All these Laws are classified in the Index according to their subjects and are arranged in chronological order under each Heading.

The substance of each law is given in as few words as possible, opposite to which summary the law itself is indicated in the several modes above mentioned.

The first and second columns shew the Number and Year of Ordinances. — The third column has been set apart for Imperial Statutes, Proclamations and the Colonial Codes (Delaleu, Decaen, and Farquhar). There is no possibility of mistaking the class to which a law in this column belongs. — The fourth column contains Royal Orders in Council and Government Notices; they are distinguished by the abbreviations which precede them respectively. The letters O. C. stand for Order in Council, G. N. for Government Notice.

The last column to the right shews the Volume and Page where the law indicated is to be found. The Volumes here referred to are the Nine volumes of Rouillard's reprint of the Laws of Mauritius; they cover the period extending from 1715 to the end of 1865. The laws belonging to that period which have no page indicated for them by me, are not contained in Rouillard's Collection. — With respect to the laws of the years subsequent to 1865, I have indicated the page at which they may be found in the annual reprints of our local laws.

The Index comprises all the Laws in force in Mauritius on 1st August 1879.

I have done my utmost to make this new Edition as perfect as possible, and it is with some confidence that I submit the result of my labours to the appreciation of the Members of the several branches of the Legal Profession and of the Civil Service in Mauritius.
